

How the Beer Industry is Helping Victims of Hurricane Harvey

Hurricane Harvey has left a devastating impact on the entire country. As a company in the beer and technology space, SteadyServ is happy to see beer industry leaders like Anheuser-Busch and MillerCoors take action to assist victims of Harvey.

Anheuser-Busch Brewery of Cartersville, Georgia halted beer production on Monday morning to send over 155,000 cans of drinking water to the victims of Hurricane Harvey in the Gulf Coast area. The Cartersville brewery location typically stops production twice a year to prepare canned emergency drinking water. You can read more about Anheuser-Busch's disaster relief efforts here.

MillerCoors is also aiding in disaster relief efforts. 50,000 cans of drinking water have been shipped to Red Cross outposts in southeastern Texas where they will be distributed to shelters. MillerCoors Brewery of Fort Worth will be donating a minimum of $25,000 to assist victims of Hurricane Harvey. You can read more about MillerCoors aiding in disaster relief efforts here.

Anheuser-Busch and MillerCoors are both working with American Red Cross to provide safe drinking water. If you would like to help the victims of Hurricane Harvey, click here.